

SOMETHING BLUE

The Cape Cod look continues to be popular but rather than pale seawashed tones, try stronger blues and aquas. Drag out old boxes and baskets and give them a lift with paint – then sit back and imagine the salty tang of the coast. The wall is painted in Resene Meltwater. Lusty's Lloyd Loom Manchester chair is in Resene Captain Cook. Floor in Resene Double Bianca. Crate from Junk & Disorderly in Resene Double Bianca (top), Resene Breeze (middle) and Resene Seeker (bottom), basket in Resene Waterfront. Resene Curtain Collection Harmony voile in Blonde.

A TOUCH OF PASTEL

Inspired by a desert sunset, using dusky pink walls in Resene Cavern Pink and a cacti in a pot painted with Resene Piha Sand - this is actually a non-slip paint with grit added so gives the pot a wonderful texture. The turquoise of Resene Fountain Blue, also used on the chair, is a classic Native American or Mexican accent colour. An upcycled drawer front becomes a handy coat rack with a fresh paint finish.

OLD BECOMES NEW

Got a hunter collector in the house who needs a special place to, well, just be? Man caves are usually relegated to the basement, garage or shed so use rough textures to your advantage. Stain the plywood or timber walls in Resene Treehouse using the Resene Colorwood stains range, and give your floor a grunty concrete look in Resene Friar Grey. For accessories, start with a comfy throne, like this beaten-looking leather armchair. Crates become shelving and a coffee table, some raw and others painted in green camouflage colours of Resene Westwood, Resene Koru, Resene San Felix, Resene Flourish, Resene Wasabi and Resene Timbuktu. Then it's open season on leather, antique toys, sports gear and stacks of magazines.
