WHITE IS WHITE IS WHITE – RIGHT?

Wrong. When you're decorating, there's white, Resene White, and there's a slew of other whites (off-whites), with touches of yellow, green, brown or grey, transforming them into alabaster, chalk, ivory and cream. Our search for the just-right white is what makes the Resene whites and neutrals colour range so popular.

Whites and off-whites pick up on other elements in view. If you have lots of greenery out the window, expect your walls to reflect a green look. Our tip: when you're using an all-white colour scheme, use a half-strength of your wall colour on the ceiling for balance.

Blackened whites such as Resene Black White, and "greened-edged" whites, such as Resene Thorndon Cream, are growing in popularity and work well with a wide range of other colours.

The Resene whites and neutrals palettes include the most popular Resene whites with up to six strength variations of each colour to help create a restful tone-on-tone colour scheme.

THE NEW BLUE

FEELING BLUE?

Blue is one of the most popular choices for decorating thanks to its ability to evoke a sense of the coast, sky or sea into our interiors. Expect to see even more variations of the shade as it features strongly in the upcoming season.

Blue becomes muted, crossing over into stormy sea-washed tones, such as Resene Dusted Blue. Fresh blues, like Resene Skydiver, ground the more powdery tones, and ever-popular Resene Duck Egg Blue bridges the gap between neutral and vibrant with just a hint of colour to lift it away from grey.

Try pale blue and white for a classic Cape Cod look or to enhance a crisp, clean kitchen, or steer toward blue-greens, such as Resene Escape, paired with sandy tones for a beachy, seaside feel.
