

Eden Homes specified Resene paints for the home, both inside and out.

“All our contacts are tried and true, and Resene is no exception. The company supplied a fibre-reinforced waterproofing membrane, Resene X200, for use on the exterior, designed to go with plaster substrates. The coating offers a strong, durable protection,” says Dines. “Inside we used Resene Spanish White, a colour selected from the Resene Whites and Neutrals Chart several years ago – this tone is still extremely popular with our clients today.”

The Resene Whites and Neutrals chart is a Resene colour chart containing 42 of the company’s most popular off-whites and neutrals, including four variations of Resene Spanish White, for those wishing to achieve a tone on tone colour scheme with the minimum of fuss.

The chart is commonly used by both homeowners and commercial building companies to select their base colour scheme before adding accents with brighter shades from the Resene The Range fashion fandeck.

Facing page: Indoor-outdoor flow is literally central to Eden Homes’ latest design. A covered courtyard has doors opening to the interior on two sides. Nu-Look supplied the joinery in the form of a Nutech product with added moisture excluding properties.

Above: A Juliet balcony provides a luxurious touch for the master bedroom. The home is built to be low maintenance and the interior paint finishes from Resene contribute to this. The colour used is Resene Spanish White and appears in varying shades throughout the interior. Low sheen finishes were used for a pleasing, easy-to-live-with finish that would act as a neutral backdrop for furnishings.